

FXS offers cost effective, energy efficient dust and fume control solutions alongside Schuko

Flamefast Extraction Solutions (FXS) have over 30 years' experience in dust and fume extraction and were extremely proud to be selected as official UK reseller, installer, and service partner for Schuko just over 12 months ago.

Covering the whole of the UK, FXS offer everything required for reliable and bespoke wood, dust and fume extraction systems including design, installation, and maintenance.

Also specialising in LEV monitoring, reactive breakdown assistance, servicing and ductwork modifications it is no wonder that FXS were chosen as the extraction experts to represent Schuko in the UK.

This exciting new partnership expands the services offered by Flamefast with an even wider range of products, including dust extraction plants, shredders, briquette presses and sanding benches.

"At Flamefast we are always looking for the best possible results from our products and services, which is why we were thrilled to join up with Schuko," says General Manager at FXS, Andy Hives. The Schuko brand is a family business that has been servicing the German market for over 50 years. Schuko products are known for their excellent build quality, reliability, energy efficiency and space saving design.

"I am really pleased to re-unite with Schuko having previously worked with them for seven years," continues Andy. "We have a mutual trust for each other, and we both have a complete understanding of the UK dust extraction market specialising in the woodworking industry."

FXS has recently been adding significant numbers to their team, who all have many years' experience working with the Schuko brand. Combined with a dedicated contract department, after-market sales and LEV specialist engineers, FXS are eager to start the new year and continue to grow.

"We are keen to show more customers the high quality of our workmanship and the products that we supply," says Jane, MD at Flamefast. "Hiring more experienced staff and an extended product range means we have more to offer than ever before."

The company is working closely with their supply chain to build a stock-holding of all critical components in their warehouse in Warrington to prevent any lengthy down times for stricken customers.

"For breakdowns, when timing is obviously critical, our team of engineers pride themselves on the ability to react as soon as the call comes in. We have staff based throughout the country to ensure that we can get to a customer's site as soon as possible," says Andy. "For capital equipment we can easily work within the supply times of the manufacturers of woodworking equipment to ensure the smooth connection into new, or existing dust extraction systems."
